22nd Biennial School Nurses International Conference Japan 2025

For the future of children around the world living in diverse societies
Connecting with the world, Learning from each other, and Further Deepening Expertise

The School Nurses International (SNI) Conference will be held for the first time in Japan. The problems faced vary depending on the background and culture of the country, but in recent years, problems related to the health and lives of children have been piling up in all countries. In Japan, with the increase in the number of foreign workers, internationalization is progressing rapidly and the country is transforming into a diverse society. As a result, Japanese schools are now enrolling many children with roots in other countries, and it is predicted that internationalization will continue to progress in the future. In particular, Shizuoka Prefecture, where the event will be held, is also the prefecture with the fifth largest number of foreign children in the country. Based on the results of past conferences, it is expected that nearly 30 countries will participate. At SNI 2025, we will discuss practices and research related to children's physical and mental health issues that are common throughout the world, as well as the current status of support and systems surrounding children. This conference aims to exchange information on the activities of Japanese school nurses and International school nurses, and to support the dreams of children who will be responsible for the future of society and build a prosperous future. The purpose is to find new prospects and provide opportunities for international exchange to further deepen your expertise. In addition, by exchanging opinions with participants from various countries, we aim to broaden our horizons and create opportunities for mutual understanding.

We look forward to the participation of many people who wish for the happiness and health of children.
